

Professor Paul Salkovskis is Professor of Clinical Psychology in the University of Oxford Department of Experimental Psychology. He is also Course Director for the Doctorate in Clinical Psychology (DClinPsych) at the Oxford Institute for Clinical Psychology Training and Research and Senior Research Fellow at Harris Manchester College. He is Director of the Oxford Cognitive Therapy Centre and the Oxford Health Psychological Interventions Clinic (OHSPIC), a specialist national NHS Clinic

He is strongly committed to the continued improvement of psychological treatments and dissemination of evidence-based and empirically grounded approaches in partnership with stakeholders.

His main area of research and clinical work is in the understanding and treatment of anxiety disorders in general, and more specifically in OCD, Panic and Agoraphobia, Hoarding and health anxiety. He has contributed to psychological understanding and treatment in all of these areas. Paul's research interests include a range of transdiagnostic factors including both cognitive (appraisal) and behavioural (safety seeking) factors. He also has expertise in Health Psychology and is a Practitioner Health and Clinical Psychologist. Paul has worked on Health Screening, Health Decision Making and the identification and treatment of psychological issues in "Medically Unexplained Symptoms" and "Long Term Conditions." He has published extensively in all of these areas.

Paul is Patron of several OCD and Anxiety charities. He is President BABCP and Editor in Chief of the BABCP Journal Behavioural and Cognitive Psychotherapy and an Honorary Fellow of the Association. He is a Fellow of the British Psychological Society and full member of the Divisions of Clinical and Health Psychology and is on the Register of Applied Psychology Supervisors. He was awarded the British Psychological Society Division of Clinical Psychology MB Shapiro Prize for Distinction in Clinical Psychology in 2017. He has published more than 400 papers and chapters and several books.